

Haggai Hisgilov

is Executive Director of Strategic Sourcing of University of California.

Haggai has more than 18 years of experience in Strategic Sourcing and Supply Chain Management with a Fortune 500 company and the University of California. Prior to that, Haggai was a Financial Analyst working for the Israeli Defense Industry.

Haggai's professional experience includes developing and managing a corporate contracts/strategic sourcing infrastructure at First Interstate Bank (Wells Fargo) which resulted in over $50 million of annual recurring and one time cost savings. Prior to accepting the position with the Office of the President Haggai worked at UCLA creating a strategic sourcing program, which was first of its kind in a public university system. This program still generates over $11 million in annual recurring cost savings to UCLA. The success of the UCLA strategic sourcing program was a key factor in the creation of the University of California strategic sourcing program.

Haggai earned his Bachelor of Arts degrees in Economics and Statistics from Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Israel.
