

THOMAS EATON

Thomas has worked in consulting, operations, and management for over 12 years, including experience with AVCOR Consulting, global software-provider BroadVision, and KPMG Consulting (now BearingPoint).

Thomas joined AVCOR Consulting in 2003. In addition to supporting overall client relationship efforts, he has focused primarily on strategy, operations, and academic-related issues. In addition to working with the Office of the President, AVCOR has been part of an on-going project at UC Santa Cruz to reduce costs and improve operational efficiencies. Thomas led project teams at the UCSC campus that sourced potential opportunities in academics, instruction, and research. Among other activities, the project team designed solutions for course and classroom scheduling and automating academic personnel review processes. Thomas also oversees AVCOR's marketing efforts.

Thomas joined BroadVision as a Senior Manager in the Strategic Services Group, helping customers across North America, Asia, and Europe to successfully utilize Internet technologies as part of their corporate business strategies. He then moved into a leadership role for the Western Region Professional Services Organization. He completed his tenure at BroadVision as Senior Director of Industry Solutions, responsible for a North American sales consulting organization.

At KPMG, Thomas was a member of the Community Bank, Banking, and Electronic Commerce consulting practices. As a Senior Consultant, he worked on a variety of projects, primarily assisting organizations to develop strategic and application-based business solutions.

Thomas holds a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration from California State University, Sacramento (CSUS) with a concentration in Management.
