Excerpts from the St. Crispin's Day speech (Henry V, Act IV, Scene iii)

Henry to Westmoreland:

"...If we are mark'd to die, we are eno[ugh]...
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.

...I am not covetous for gold...
Such outward things dwell not in my desires.
But if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.

...He which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart; ...
We would not die in that man's company....

This day is call'd the feast of Crispin.
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,...
Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,
And say "These wounds I had on Crispin's day."
...Then shall our names be ... freshly rememb'red.
This story shall the good man teach his son;
And ...we in it shall be remembered—
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers;
For he to-day that sheds his blood with me
Shall be my brother; ...
And gentlemen in England now-a-bed
Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here,
And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks
That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's Day."

—William Shakespeare 1599
