COMMUNITY EDUCATORS'
SUMMER INSTITUTE

A UNIVERSITY-COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT PROJECT

taking place at

The CESAR E. CHAVEZ STUDENT CENTER, UC BERKELEY

The Community Educators' Summer Institute (CESI) is a FREE, two-day training program that will offer opportunities for community-based organizations to constructively evaluate their current academic support programs and to ensure that programs are student-centered, relevant to the school day, aligned with district and state academic standards in core content areas, as well as, engaging and appropriately challenging. Additionally, the Institute will offer participating organizations staff tools, resources and strategies that will help build the capacity of their current programs as well as encourage sustainability.

Institute participants will receive:

1. Program planning, implementation and evaluation checklists
2. A resource guide filled with after-school resources, helpful hints, ideas, Web sites, videos, local organizations, publications and curriculum resources for planning after-school programs
3. Sample program models including sample staff training curriculum
4. User-friendly evaluation tools to measure program outcomes and evaluation
5. A Certificate of Completion

Registration Materials, the Institute Agenda & Program Details
Will Be Available Monday, February 4, 2008.
