

College Access & Preparation Forum

Renewing our commitment to student equity, access and achievement

Welcome, Colleagues.

Thank you for setting aside the next couple of days to attend the 2017 College Access and Preparation (CAP) Forum. We come to this event from different institutions, each with its own ways and character. But we share a common purpose: to advance college access and strengthen preparedness for all California students, particularly those from disadvantaged and underrepresented-minority backgrounds and those who are first-generation college aspirants.

We'll hear from uplifting UC leaders like Vice Chancellor Jerry Kang, our host at UCLA, and keynote speakers Professor Pedro Noguera and Vice President Robin Holmes-Sullivan. Informational sessions will impart news and best practices about financial aid, support for undocumented students, community college transfer and preparing students to meet basic needs in college, to list just a few topics.

The success of the conference depends ultimately on the many people who have worked to plan and organize this event. In particular, we thank our steering committee members for their wise advice and hands-on service in coordinating and leading sessions, and our Office of the President colleagues who have worked to pull together all of the logistical details for what we hope is a valuable experience for you.

This year's event is about renewing our commitment to students. I hope you will take time to reflect on the significance of your contribution to the students of California, and to recognize how your good work resonates across the state and into the future.

Best regards,

YVETTE GULLATT
