UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

Report on the California Subject Matter Project, 2006-2010

Legislative Request

This report complies with Section 99200 of the Education Code – amended in 2007 by Senate Bill No. 232, Chapter 292 – which requires the California Subject Matter Project (CSMP) Concurrence Committee to provide a final report to the Governor and to the appropriate policy and fiscal committees of the Legislature on or before January 1, 2011. The report covers a four-year period and provides specific information about the CSMP, namely:

- (A) The number, and level of experience, of participants in each subject matter project.
- (B) The total amount of funds expended, on an annual basis, for each subject matter project.
- (C) An explanation of the type of professional development activities offered pursuant to each subject matter project.
- (D) A list including the name and location of each school affiliated with a subject matter project.¹

The Concurrence Committee is comprised of individuals affiliated with leadership, management, or instruction, in education or education policy entities and are selected as follows:

- (1) One representative selected by the Regents of the University of California.
- (2) One representative selected by the Board of Trustees of the California State University.
- (3) Two representatives selected by the State Board of Education, at least one of whom has significant experience with direct classroom instruction.
- (4) One representative selected by the Governor.
- (5) One representative selected by the Commission on Teacher Credentialing.
- (6) One representative selected by the Curriculum Development and Supplemental Materials Commission.
- (7) One representative of the California Community Colleges selected by the Board of Governors of the California Community Colleges.
- (8) One representative of an independent postsecondary institution selected by the Association of Independent California Colleges and Universities.²

UCOP Response

The University, with the approval of the Concurrence Committee, has statutory responsibility to establish, administer, and maintain a network of professional development programs. These programs are designed to create opportunities for researchers, higher education faculty, and elementary and secondary school faculty to work together to identify exemplary teaching practices, examine and develop research on learning, knowledge, and educational materials, and to provide support to teachers to develop and enhance content knowledge and pedagogical skills.

Consistent with the Education Code, which requires a four-year report as noted above, the Concurrence Committee has approved this report on the writing, reading and literature, mathematics, science, history-social science, and international studies projects. The report covers July 1, 2006 through June 30, 2010 and provides for each subject matter project the experience of participants, funds expended, professional development activities offered, and affiliated schools.

Number and Experience of Participants

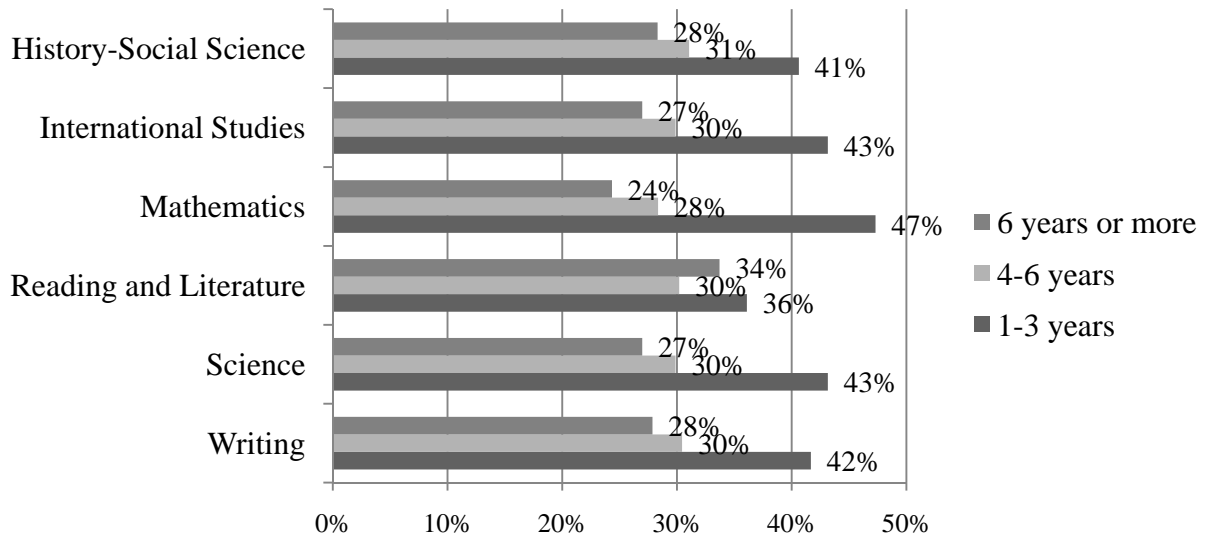

From 2006-2010, CSMP served 94,703 distinct participants.³ Table 1 below provides the number of distinct participants by each subject matter project.

Project Name	Number of Distinct People Served
History-Social Science	7,588
International Studies	5,267
Math	21,841
Reading and Literature	22,297
Science	10,234
Writing	38,735

Overall, the projects serve teachers at all stages of their careers, from novice teachers with 1-3 years of experience (40.89% of total participants) to veteran teachers with 6 years of experience or more (29.41%). Most teachers served have less than 6 years of teaching experience (70.3%). However, the teaching experience of participants varies between subject matter projects, as shown in Figure 1.

A major focus of the subject matter projects is to foster the development of teacher leaders. Teacher leaders are individuals who are skilled in a discipline and share their expertise with other teachers, such as novice teachers.

Funds Expended

There is one statewide office for each of the subject areas. Table 2 provides a four-year summary of expenditures for each subject matter project. Expenditures covered program operations and statewide office functions. The number of sites per subject area varies from 7 to 23 and this is the primary reason for funding allocation differences. Table 2 shows expenditures of State funds provided through annual Budget Acts and federal No Child Left Behind (NCLB) funds.⁴

⁴ This information doesn't include other money sites may receive from district contracts or other one-time sources.

While the California Education Code only requires legislative reporting on the six projects discussed above, per Senate Bill No. 611, Chapter 857 (2003) the University is also authorized to provide maintenance-level funding for three additional projects in the areas of the arts, foreign language, and physical education-health. All three of these projects now operate with the content standards and frameworks adopted by the California State Board of Education (at the time SB 611 was adopted, these three projects were still working on aligning their work with SBE content standards). From 2006-10 these three projects received a total of $8,226,747 in University funds and grants. Additional information about the California Foreign Language Project, California Arts Project, and California Physical Education-Health Project can be found in Appendix C.

Professional Development Activities Offered

Through professional development activities, the projects demonstrate an ongoing commitment to deepening teacher content knowledge, improving teacher knowledge of pedagogy in the content areas, and developing teacher leaders across the state. CSMP focuses on improving the teaching of English learners and low literacy students, as well as teaching to standards. CSMP has also developed networks of teacher learning communities that investigate current research relevant to teachers' subject areas. CSMP professional development activities are designed to be subject matter-specific and each discipline has a different content focus.

In accordance with the California Education Code, Section 99200 (a), each subject matter project aims to:

- (1) Develop and enhance teachers' subject matter and content knowledge in the subject matter areas specified in Education Code Section 99201.
- (2) Develop and enhance teachers' instructional strategies to improve student learning and academic performance as measured against State Board of Education standards adopted pursuant to Education Code Section 60605 and, where applicable, to standards adopted pursuant to Education Code Section 60811.
- (3) Provide teachers with instructional strategies for working with English learners.
- (4) Provide teachers with access and opportunity to examine current research that is demonstrably linked to improved student learning and achievement as measured by performance levels on state tests administered pursuant to Education Code Section 60605 or on English language development assessments developed, pursuant to Chapter 7 (commencing with Education Code Section 60810) of Part 33 of Division 4 of Title 2, for English language learners.
- (5) Maintain subject-specific professional communities that create and encourage ongoing opportunities for teacher learning and research.
- (6) Develop and deploy as teacher leaders, teachers with demonstrated levels of expertise in the classroom and certifiable levels of content knowledge.

The California History-Social Science Project (CHSSP) is a K-16 collaborative of historians, teachers, and affiliated scholars dedicated to the pursuit of educational excellence in history and social science. Though the format of professional development activities offered and specific content can vary, each CHSSP program has common elements:

- Scholars provide lectures and lead discussions to increase teachers' content knowledge and engage teachers in investigating significant questions and debates in history, geography, government, or economics.
- Scholars and CHSSP teacher leaders address pedagogy by providing lesson models and guiding teachers through discipline-specific thinking and inquiry group discussions and exercises.
- Teachers apply what they have learned by creating standards-based lessons designed to engage students in historical thinking and inquiry.

Examples of programs include: Teaching American History; Teaching World History; Building Academic Literacy through History; and Teaching Geography, Government, or Economics.

California International Studies Project (CISP) leaders provide standards-based professional development in history and international studies to prepare students to live, work, and be informed, active citizens in a world where conditions, people, and distant events may have a critical impact on their own and others' lives. Though the format and specific content can vary, CISP programs have common elements:

- Participants develop insight into the connections among peoples, ideas and events, and view global issues from a range of perspectives, using analysis skills and primary source documents.
- University and K-12 presenters model effective instructional strategies to help students develop academic language skills and analytical ability along with gaining content knowledge.
- Participants develop an understanding of the richness and variety of the human community, and learn to "walk in someone else's shoes."

Examples of programs include: World and U.S. History; World Culture; Regional Studies; Equity-Focused Institutes; and Academic Language Development.

The California Mathematics Project (CMP) offers a variety of mathematics programs designed specifically to meet the needs of teachers, schools, and/or districts and aligned with the California Mathematics Content Standards and Framework. CMP sponsors intensive professional development institutes, academic year programs, academic year support, and other programs. The content and focus of these programs are designed in collaboration with schools, districts, and teachers in response to identified needs. Programs target specific teacher groups such as new teachers, teachers from hard-to-staff schools, teachers in urban or rural settings, teachers in a specific grade span, and teachers seeking certification. Though the format and specific content can vary, CMP programs have common elements:

- Strategies to improve teaching of mathematics tasks that have high cognitive demand;
- Student empowerment as a goal, by developing mathematical reasoning through gathering data, analyzing evidence, and building arguments to support hypotheses;
- Strategies for working with English learners; and
- Support for the development of teacher leadership and collaboration.

Programs cover all five strands of mathematical proficiency: 1) conceptual understanding, 2) procedural fluency, 3) strategic competence, 4) adaptive reasoning, and 5) productive disposition.

The California Reading and Literature Project (CRLP) programs include Pre-K-12 “signature” programs that are offered at all sites, as well as locally designed programs that are developed to accommodate the diverse needs of a particular region. These programs are offered throughout the academic year. Though the format and specific content can vary, CRLP programs have common elements:

- Developing teachers’ content knowledge and expanding their teaching strategies.
- Supporting the effective use of state frameworks, standards, and instructional materials.
- Focusing on academic English-language development.
- Creating a cadre of expert teacher leaders and university scholars to help translate educational policies into sound classroom practices.
- Linking universities with schools and districts in collaborative partnerships.

Examples of programs include:

- Results, Assessment, Instruction, and Intervention (grades K-6) develops participants’ competencies to effectively assess and teach the continuum of language skills, academic content knowledge, and instructional strategies that promote academic success.
- Results for English Learners (grades K-6, SB 472 English Learner Professional Development Approved Provider) prepares teachers to identify both content and language objectives in daily instruction and how to structure multiple opportunities for both oral and written language practice to increase their students’ academic language proficiency.
- A Focused Approach to Frontloading English Instruction for Houghton Mifflin and Open Court Reading (grades K-6) prepares teachers to effectively teach language throughout the instructional day with particular emphasis on how to link English language instruction to reading instruction using the new California State Board-adopted reading programs.

- Spanish-to-English Transferability (grades K-6) provides biliteracy teachers with tools that will help their students transition from Spanish reading to English.
- Content Area Language and Literacy For Academic Success in Middle and High School (grades 7 –12) prepares participants on how to effectively integrate academic language and literacy instruction into their content-area instruction using subject-matter text. Participants learn to implement instructional strategies and routines to help make content-area text more accessible to all students and increase their use of academic language.
- Secondary Academic Language Tools (grades 7 –12) provides knowledge and strategies that teachers can use to help their students develop the academic language necessary to become more literate in their subject area.

The California Science Project (CSP) network provides high quality, standards-based professional development in science to ensure that every student achieves the highest standards of academic performance. Though the format and specific content can vary, CSP programs have common elements:

- Academic faculty focus and present specific content topics in earth, biological or physical sciences to strengthen teachers' content knowledge, develop a deep conceptual understanding, and increase awareness of new content and expectations.
- University and K-12 presenters model effective instructional strategies while teaching the content. Teachers develop as professional and effective educators as they learn and incorporate new pedagogy along with science into their teaching.

Examples of programs include:

- Science Content Institutes are designed for science teachers and are aligned with the California Science Content Standards for K-12. Institutes focus on different topics in earth, biological, or physical sciences. Some sites offer stand-alone summer institutes while others also offer courses for credit or as part of a master's degree program.
- Literacy in the Science Classroom programs are designed for secondary science teachers and are aligned with the California Science Content Standards, grades 7-12. This three-day program focuses on text-based science materials and argumentation writing in the science classroom.
- English Learners in the Science Classroom programs are designed for science teachers at all grade levels and are aligned with the California Science Content Standards, grades K-12. This program focuses on multiple approaches and strategies, such as science notebooks and Specially Designed Academic Instruction in English (SDAIE), which help science teachers differentiate instruction for English learners.

The California Writing Project (CWP) is a statewide professional development network that serves teachers of writing at all grade levels, preschool through university, and in all subjects. Because writing matters for success in the school and university, as well as in the community and workplace, CWP has a central mission – to improve student writing and learning by improving the teaching of writing. Though the format and specific content can vary, CWP programs have common elements:

- Improving student writing and literacy outcomes by strengthening teachers' practice.
- Increasing teacher knowledge about the teaching of writing by providing frequent and sustained opportunities for teachers to write and examine theory, research, and practice systematically.
- Increasing teachers' knowledge of formative and summative writing assessments to inform their instruction and identify the differentiated support their students require.
- Linking university and K-12 educators in informed communities of practice to design and develop comprehensive writing programs and partner in educational research, assessment, implementation, and reform.
- Enhancing the professional role of classroom teachers and equipping them for leadership in their school, district, community, or local writing project.

Writing Projects work with schools and districts to tailor professional development programs that address the local needs of teachers as well as students. Examples of programs include, but are not limited, to:

- Improving Students' Analytical Writing, a program for secondary teachers and university instructors, focuses on improving the analytical writing and critical reading of non-traditionally college-bound students and preparing them for college readiness and success.
- Improving the Writing of English learners and Migrant Education Students summer and school-year programs address assessing and improving the writing of English learners and include family literacy workshops to strengthen the literacy and learning connections between home and school.
- Teaching Writing in a Digital Age programs focus on current communication technologies and the ways they intersect with academic writing. Teachers learn to use Web 2.0 tools and multimedia applications to foster students' participation, engagement, writing improvement, and academic achievement.
- Primary Writes: Engaging Writers, Exceeding Standards programs help Pre/K-2 teachers integrate writing throughout their curriculum in purposeful ways and set the stage for young students to become thoughtful, engaged writers and readers.

Professional Development Program Outcomes

CSMP professional development reflects the characteristics of effective professional development (Gallagher et al, 2005a, Gallagher et al, 2005b) as described in research, namely, (a) focus on content knowledge; (b) opportunities for active learning; and (c) coherence with other learning activities. Core structural features that affect teacher learning include: (a) the form of the activity (e.g., workshop vs. study group); (b) collective participation of teachers from the same school, grade, or subject; and (c) the duration of the activity (Garet et al, 1999).

From 2006-2010, the average number of hours participants spent in professional development institutes per year was 37. Table 3 below provides the average project participant hours by subject matter project.

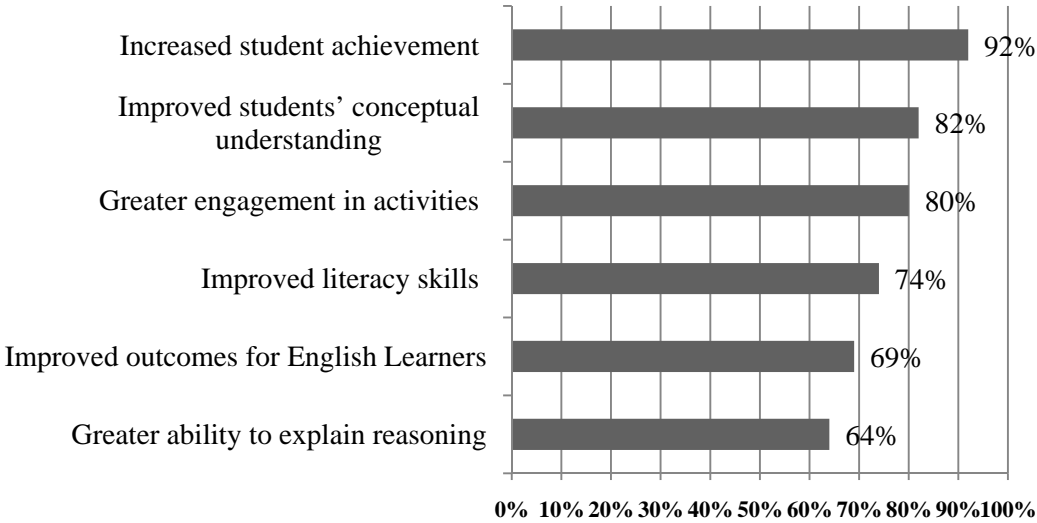

Project Name	Average Hours
History-Social Science	32
International Studies	37
Mathematics	46
Reading and Literature	25
Science	45
Writing	35
Overall average	37

From 2006-2010, CSMP had a total of 3,808,866 contact hours and 16,742 professional development activities. Table 4 provides professional development activities contact hours and the number of institutes offered by each subject matter project.

Project Name	Number of contact hours for teachers and administrators	Number of institutes
History-Social Science	243,743	1,978
International Studies	196,963	1,668
Math	1,005,338	3,434
Reading and Literature	558,999	2,947
Science	457,246	1,396
Writing	1,346,577	5,319

As shown in Figure 2, teachers consistently rate CSMP professional development more highly than other professional development (Gallagher et al, 2005a, Gallagher et al, 2005b). In a teacher survey conducted by SRI International (2005), teachers also reported that their participation in the CSMP contributed to student learning, not only to student achievement (92%), but also to students' conceptual understanding (82%), engagement in activities (80%), and ability to explain their reasoning (64%). Teachers reported that their participation in the CSMP improved their skills for working with students struggling to meet standards; teachers reported improved literacy skills among students (74%) and improved outcomes for English learners (69%).

Affiliated Schools

From 2006-2010, CSMP served teachers from 2,719 unique K-12 schools (unduplicated count of schools served). The service regions extended as far north as Del Norte County and as far south as Imperial County. The top ten cities with the most schools served were Sacramento, Los Angeles, San Jose, Oakland, San Diego, Fresno, San Francisco, Santa Ana, Stockton, and Santa Rosa. Table 5 provides the number of schools served by the top ten cities with the most schools served.

Appendix C - Supplemental Data for the Arts, Foreign Language, and Physical Education-Health Projects

The California Arts Project (TCAP) is a statewide professional development network that serves single subject, multiple subject, and career technical education teachers preschool through university in dance, music, theatre and visual arts. An education in the arts equips students with creative thinking and problem solving needed for school and for the workforce, particularly for careers in the arts, media, and entertainment. Since these skills and knowledge are so important, TCAP has a central mission to improve the teaching and learning of the arts. Though the format and specific content can vary, TCAP programs have common elements:

- Increasing arts teacher knowledge by examining theory, research, and practice.
- Strengthening teachers' knowledge of formative and summative assessments, such as calibrating students' work and identifying students' needs for differentiated instruction.
- Linking university and K-12 educators within communities of practice to design comprehensive arts curriculum and partner in educational research, assessment, and implementation.
- Enhancing the professional role of classroom teachers by equipping them for leadership in their school, district, community, or regional arts project.

All TCAP programs are aligned to and support the California Visual and Performing Arts Content Standards and specific programs support the Career Technical Education Model Curriculum Standards for Arts, Media, and Entertainment.

TCAP works with schools, districts, county offices, industry, and community partners to tailor professional development programs. Examples of programs include, but are not limited, to:

- Collaborative Design Institute is a program where professional developers facilitate cadres of single subject arts teachers to collaboratively develop a unit of instruction and student assessment.
- Pathways to Understanding the Arts Disciplines are four arts discipline-specific institutes in dance, music, theatre, and visual arts. These institutes focus on developing the content knowledge, skills, processes, teacher confidence, and pedagogy needed to begin to design and implement Standards-based arts instruction.
- Student Work Online 2.0 is a combination of face-to-face and web-based professional development for teachers of the arts.
- Nexus of Visual and Performing and Arts, Media, and Entertainment Education Workshops provide information, support, and discourse on arts and career technical education.
- Arts Education Assessment Tool is a program in which teams from schools and districts engage to assess the quality of their arts instructional program.

The California Foreign Language Project (CFLP) sponsors professional development programs aligned with the state-adopted foreign language standards and framework in order to deepen teachers' content knowledge, strengthen and expand language programs, and prepare participants to effectively use and teach language and cultural content at every level of California's educational system. CFLP supports teachers to prepare students to be both college and career-ready and able to successfully interact and compete in our trans-global society. Program participants design and implement instruction that enable students to become informed global citizens who negotiate meaning across languages and cultures in order to explore problems and issues rooted in perspectives different from their own. Though the format and specific content can vary, CFLP programs have common elements:

- Improving world language and culture education by strengthening teachers' content knowledge and pedagogical skills specific to the teaching of performance-based language instruction.
- Providing teacher professional development that helps prepare students to understand and interpret oral language and written texts, and to share information and concepts across language and cultural borders in meaningful ways.
- Supporting participants in preparing students to communicate effectively in culturally appropriate ways in their native and acquired languages within our dynamic and increasingly diverse society.
- Strengthening and expanding K-16, world language and culture programs that reflect diverse ideas and perspectives and provide access and equity in learning for all students.
- Engaging university and K-12 world language educators in professional learning networks that promote collaborative leadership and research-based classroom practices.
- Offering opportunities for world language educators to examine effective teaching and performance-based assessment practices and employ results for continuous program improvement.

Examples of programs include, but are not limited, to: language and grade-level specific standards-aligned institutes, seminars and workshops; seminars for teachers of heritage/native speakers and English learners and those who teach in immersion and dual-immersion schools; workshops focusing on technology mediated learning and long distance instruction; and programs focusing on proficiency-oriented assessment designed to assess students' proficiency in all language domains (listening, speaking, reading and writing) as well as their level of cultural content competency.

The California Physical Education-Health Project (CPE-HP) is a statewide, K-16 professional development network that serves all grade level physical education teachers, health educators, and classroom teachers whose teaching assignment includes either physical education or health education. A high quality physical education and health education program supports students in the development of skills, knowledge, and attitudes that lead to physically active lifestyles and positive health behaviors, both of which have been demonstrated to affect student success.

Though the format and specific content can vary, CPE-HP programs have common elements:

- Improving teachers' academic content knowledge and pedagogical skills specific to the teaching and learning of performance-based physical education and health education.
- Improving teachers' abilities to assess the needs of English learners and implement teaching practices that meet student learning needs.
- Strengthening teachers' use of assessment strategies (formative and summative) to inform instruction, evaluate student work, and identify and implement differentiated instructional strategies in order for students to achieve proficiency in State Board adopted Physical Education Content Standards and Health Education Content Standards.
- Engaging university and K-12 teachers to design, implement, and evaluate research agendas that examine program impact.
- Enhancing teachers' leadership skills and supporting teachers to take an active leadership role at the local, state, regional, and national level.

Examples of programs include, but are not limited, to:

- Physical Education Standards-aligned Institutes – Biomechanics, Exercise Science, Pediatric Exercise Science, Psychology of Movement, Sociology of Physical Activity.
- Health Education Standards-aligned Institutes – Drugs, Alcohol and Tobacco and the Adolescent Brain, Sexual Health, Performance Nutrition, Injury Prevention.
